

STATEMENT OF PURPOSE

Dear, Admissions Committee,

My journey towards a career in global health began with a strong sense of responsibility and a desire to make a positive impact in underserved communities. As a Health Assistant Clinical Certificate holder with experience as an Assistant Ward In-charge at St. Francis of Assisi Catholic Church Health Center, I have witnessed firsthand the challenges faced by vulnerable populations in accessing quality healthcare. These experiences have fueled my passion for addressing health disparities on a global scale. My academic background in nursing, culminating in a Bachelor of Science in Nursing from Catholic University College, has equipped me with the clinical skills and knowledge necessary to contribute meaningfully to the field of global health. Through my time at Narh Bitu School of Nursing and Catholic University College, I have honed my ability to deliver effective nursing care, communicate efficiently with diverse populations, and serve as a health educator in under-resourced settings. The MRes Global Health program at the University of Glasgow resonates with my career aspirations and academic interests. I am drawn to the program's interdisciplinary approach, which combines public health, social science, and policy perspectives to tackle complex health challenges. I am particularly excited about the opportunity to engage with a diverse cohort of students and faculty, fostering collaboration and learning from different cultural perspectives. One aspect of the MRes Global Health program that stands out to me is the emphasis on practical research skills and fieldwork experience. I believe that hands-on experience is crucial in understanding the intricacies of global health issues and developing effective interventions. I am eager to engage in research projects that address pressing global health issues, such as infectious diseases, maternal and child health, and health systems strengthening. My long-term goal is to leverage my expertise in nursing and global health to contribute to sustainable development initiatives and policy-making in low-resource settings. I am committed to promoting health equity and social justice, particularly for marginalized populations who often bear the brunt of health inequities. By pursuing the MRes Global Health program at the University of Glasgow, I aim to expand my knowledge base, refine my research skills, and engage in meaningful projects that have a lasting impact on global health outcomes. In conclusion, I am confident that the MRes Global Health program at the University of Glasgow will provide me with the necessary tools and opportunities to further my career in global health. I am excited about the prospect of collaborating with like-minded individuals, delving into cutting-edge research, and contributing to positive change in global health practice. I am ready to embark on this transformative journey and am eager to immerse myself in the vibrant academic community at the University of Glasgow.

Yours sincerely,

Ms SABINA KUMI
